This is a large estate of nearly 150 acres owned by Philippe Casteja. He has been making improvements, and the 2009 is certainly one of the better wines I have tasted from this estate. A blend of 72% Cabernet Sauvignon and the rest Merlot, the creme de cassis of Pauillac is well-displayed in this medium-bodied, elegant, richly fruity wine. It should drink nicely for 15 or more years.

Served blind at the Southwold 2009 tasting. The Lynch-Moussas '09 is turning out to be a little gem. It has a lovely lifted bouquet with blackberries, cassis and a strong, compelling graphite thread. The palate is medium-bodied with dense, grippy tannins. It is masculine, thorough and there is certainly good breeding here. This is a solid Pauillac that should age well. Tasted January 2013.

Attractive nose of blueberries, blackberries and currants follow through to full body, with super silky tannins. Fresh herbs and spices. Very well done from here. Best in 2017.

Firm and solid, but also full of charm and elegance, the fruit ripe and sweet, delicious. That gives already a wine with balance, tremendous juiciness as well as structure.

Mid crimson. Attractive, mineral, very classic Pauillac nose with lots of sweetness too. Very pleasing for the short term even if not one of the greats.
